WAKING UP WHITE

Rev. Joel Miller

Former interim minister Joel Miller returns to Corvallis and the UUFC pulpit, from his current congregation in Rochester, NY. Come help give him a hearty welcome! He'll be sharing about his own waking up (not yet "woke", but working on it) and relate it to the experiences that many White folks have in working to be "woke".

WHY DO WE GATHER ON SUNDAY MORNINGS?

"The aim of all worship is to help...us know and feel how we relate as individuals to ourselves, to the world, to the totality of being. The aim of common...worship is to help us face up to our individual and collective limitations and failures, and to open us to sources of creative, healing, transforming and renewing power. It is to help us discover how that which transcends our narrow individual existence can move us, challenge us, inspire us, stimulate us to think, feel, act and be. It is to help us declare, celebrate, rejoice in those things we have found to be "of worth." The aim of common worship is to help us reorder, reopen, reshape and reinterpret our experience to help us find the power to reaffirm again and again in word and deed what is worthy of our ultimate commitment."

CENTERING AND DE-CENTERING

Rev. Jill McAllister

I think balance, and being centered, is illusive, and occurs only in brief moments. More often, we are slightly off-balance, at the very least. Maybe that's what work, and life, is all about. Sometimes, off-balance or off-center is where we need to be, to have a sense of what comes next.
