Dear Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Corvallis,

Your donation to the Corvallis Daytime Drop-in Center continues to make a huge impact in our community. As winter settles in and the pandemic continues, our neighbors in poverty are even more in need of your support. You make a difference in all kinds of ways! Here are a few, recent stories of how you are making an impact on peoples' lives.

Sean was passing through town on his way to the Seattle Vet Center when he got in a car accident and lost everything he owned. You helped him get grounded, secure a seat on the bus going north, and make it to the place where he could receive veteran’s assistance.

Missy had been working, but mental health and physical disabilities have made it impossible for her to continue. At CDDC, she receives help filing for disability unemployment and a stimulus check.

For Juan, CDDC has been a springboard into permanent supportive housing and a path toward sobriety. He has reconnected with family he has not seen in years.

Divina didn’t understand the details and repercussions of COVID-19, and our education outreach offered her that knowledge.

Dawson has been searching for work but needs some advocacy and technology support for online job applications.

Robin needs someplace confidential to connect with her case manager.

Harper needs socks and hygiene supplies. Patty needs help with a co-pay for medications. Sam needs a fresh pair of clothes. Alphonso needs coffee, conversation, and some dry shoes.

From the smallest gesture to the largest intervention, your contributions are part of the engine that drives CDDC. You make all of this possible, so thank you! We can’t do it without you.

In hope and solidarity,

Aleita Hass-Holcombe, Board President, CDDC

Allison Hobgood, Executive Director, CDDC
